

GEDYON — DAILY WORKOUTS, ALL 45 WEEKS

THE COACHING DNA — every element traces to a system that produced champions: Lananna/Thomas (championship patience: drills + strides daily, peak in July not October) · Ingebrigtsen/Norwegian (threshold CONTROLLED at lactate 2.5-3.5, reps always in the bank; double-threshold only in P4, only green days, only earned) · Kerr/Mackey (power work, composed fast closers on everything) · Kejelcha/Ethiopian (progression longs — slow start, strong finish, speed on tired legs) · Bekele (massive patient aerobic base, hills as strength, form never sacrificed). The thread that unites all five: EASY DAYS ARE INSULTINGLY EASY, hard days are controlled, and nobody races training.

Companion to the 45-Week Build. Every day written out. Paces shown assume each tier gate is PASSED at its earliest week — if a gate isn't passed yet, keep using your current tier's paces for every session (the structure stays identical). WHOOP gates every day: yellow = one quality max + HR caps, red = easy/rest and the session moves. Updated Fri Sep 4, 2026 — Thursday's tempo is BANKED; Fri-Sun below, Week 1 starts Mon Sep 7. Strides now carry exact paces (min/mi + treadmill mph) per tier; every WU/CD line has numbers. SUPPS lines use YOUR cabinet. STRENGTH SYSTEM: LIFT A/B Mon/Thu after the PM run (loads + progression printed on each day; reps first, then +5lb; deloads halve it; race season maintains) · core Mon/Thu (A/B circuits, progress by phase) · POWER after Wed hills/speed (plyos at max intent, full rest — this is where lean speed comes from) · DURABILITY 5min after Tue/Fri quality (calves/hips — the anti-breakdown work). All bodyweight: powerful and cut, never bulky. The rule: power reps are always FRESH and explosive; core is done to quality, not to burnout.

HOW TO RUN EVERY PIECE — THE DETAILS THAT MAKE IT WORK

Same workout, different execution = different training. Two habits to break, named directly: (1) the 20-minute one-pace warm-up/cool-down — a long slog at a single moderate pace is junk volume that tires you before the work and blunts recovery after it; warm-ups are short and PROGRESSIVE, cool-downs are short and SLOW. (2) jumping straight into the work — the first rep on cold legs runs on the wrong energy system, spikes HR, and makes every following rep worse. The strides at the end of the warm-up ARE the ignition — they are not optional decoration.

PIECE	HOW FAST	HOW LONG	REST / STRUCTURE	WHY IT MATTERS
WARM-UP (quality days)	PROGRESSIVE: first 5min at recovery shuffle (10:30+), middle at slow-easy (10:00), last 5min at the FAST end of easy (9:30). Never one flat pace.	12-15min (2mi) — not 20+. More is not better; it is withdrawal from the workout.	Finish with the prescribed strides, take 2min of walking/standing AFTER the last stride, THEN start rep 1.	Raises muscle temp and opens the aerobic system without spending it. The 2min gap lets HR settle so rep 1 starts honest.
STRIDES	Build through each one: jog the first 5s, fast by 10s, at ~mile race effort (NOT sprint) for the last 10s. Tall, quick, relaxed — if your face or shoulders tighten, it is too fast.	20 seconds each, 6x on easy days, 4x pre-workout.	60-90s WALK between — full recovery, never jog-loop straight into the next one.	Recruits fast-twitch fibers and sharpens mechanics with zero fatigue cost — but only if each one is rested and relaxed.
REST BETWEEN 1000m REPS	STANDING or slow walk. Hands on hips, breathe. Not a jog.	60-75s (build weeks) / 90s (deloads). Time it — cutting rest short turns threshold work into a race.	Start the next rep when the clock says, not when you feel ready (that is what the rest length is calibrated for).	Threshold reps only work at threshold. Short rest or hot reps push lactate past the zone and you train the wrong system.
REST BETWEEN HILL REPS	Walk down. Fully. No jogging the descent.	The full walk-down (~90s-2min). If you are still breathing hard at the bottom, stand another 30s.	Every rep at MAX effort requires full recovery — 8 great reps beat 12 tired ones.	Hills train power. Power needs a fresh nervous system every rep — tired hills are just slow intervals with injury risk.
FARTLEK FLOATS	The 90s float is a SLOW jog (10:00+), not a steady run. The surge is only a surge if the float is real.	90s between 3min hard bouts.	Hard bouts at tempo effort; the mid-surge gear change is 30s FASTER within the bout, then back to hard — never all-out.	Teaches gear changes for laps 2-3 of the mile. Floats too fast = one long moderate run = nothing trained.
COOL-DOWN	SLOW. Recovery shuffle, 10:30+/mi, slower than feels dignified. It is a flush, not a run.	10min (1-1.5mi) after quality. NOT 20min — after a hard session, extra time on your feet is cost, not fitness.	Optional: 5min walk at the end. Then eat within 30min.	Clears metabolites and starts recovery. Running it at easy pace (9:30) quietly adds load to your hardest days — the opposite of its job.

PIECE	HOW FAST	HOW LONG	REST / STRUCTURE	WHY IT MATTERS
EASY RUNS	9:30-10:15 (current tier). Talk test: full sentences OUT LOUD. HR 125-140.	As prescribed — no bonus miles.	No structure needed — this is the one place "just go run" is correct.	The engine is built here, at low cost. Run these too fast and Tuesday/Friday degrade — the classic self-sabotage loop.

WU/CD paces above are for your CURRENT tier (T1). When a tier gate is passed, shift them with it: warm-up always ends at the fast end of that tier's easy band, cool-down is always ~60s/mi slower than easy. The quality-day template never changes: progressive WU -> strides -> 2min settle -> work -> short slow CD.

MEASURE EVERYTHING — THE TESTING PROTOCOL

Tests are the truth-tellers of this plan: they decide the tiers, catch breakdown before it happens, and prove the training works. Every metric below is either automatic (WHOOP/watch/app) or takes under a minute. The rule: measure everything, react only to TRENDS — single data points are noise.

WHEN	MEASURE	WHAT IT TELLS YOU / ACT WHEN
Every morning	WHOOP: recovery %, HRV, RHR, sleep — automatic	Gates the day (green/yellow/red). ACT: HRV below your SWC band 3+ days = cut the week 20%, no debate.
Every run	Watch: avg pace, avg + max HR, splits — automatic. Log RPE 1-10 in the app after	Feeds effective VDOT. Pace-at-HR is THE fitness signal: same pace at lower HR = engine growing.
Quality days	HR in the working sets vs the ceiling · did the last rep feel like the third? (yes/no)	ACT: two sessions in a row pinned at ceiling or grinding = tier is too hot, hold and retest.
Mon + Thu AM	Weight, same scale, after bathroom before food/water	Trend line only — 2 points/week, ignore daily bounce. ACT: dropping faster than 1.5 lb/wk = eat more, you are burning muscle.
Weekly (Sun)	The app's Aerobic Response card: last-3-runs HR@pace vs 3-4 weeks ago	ADAPTING = base building. STRESS (HR up, pace down) = flag — next week easy regardless of the calendar.
Every 4th Fri	TEMPO TEST: 20min at next tier pace — avg pace, avg HR, HR drift first 10min vs last 10min	The gate. Drift under 5% = aerobic durability is real. Pass = tier up. Fail = data, not failure — retest in 4 weeks.
Every block	Hill rep count at same effort · stride mechanics (film one occasionally)	Power trend. More quality reps at the same max effort = the strength system is working.
Races / TTs (wk 10, 18, 22, 26, 30...)	Time, splits, HR, RPE, last-400 speed	The only measurements that outrank everything else. Race results move tiers instantly.
Monthly	Resting morning test: 60s standing HR after waking · niggle inventory 0-10 by body part	Early-warning radar. Any niggle at 4+ for a week = tell KODA, adjust before it becomes an injury.

Most of this is already automatic: WHOOP syncs to the app, runs sync from Strava/watch, the app computes effective VDOT and the Aerobic Response trend, and the weekly agent files its report every Sunday. Your only manual jobs: RPE after runs, Mon/Thu weigh-ins, and honesty on "could I have done 3 more reps."

HEAT & COLD — DOSE THEM LIKE DRUGS

TOOL	PROTOCOL	WHEN	NEVER
SAUNA / HEAT	15-25min @ 170-190F immediately after EASY runs · electrolytes after · no sauna? overdress easy runs (hoodie+tights) for the same stimulus	P2 onward, 3-4x/wk — plasma volume + stroke volume on top of altitude: the free 2-4%%	Before quality · on red days · race week (except one 10min familiarizer)
COLD PLUNGE	50-55F, 5-10min, legs in, evening	P5-P6 between races · back-to-back hard days when tomorrow matters more · acute niggle flare	Within 6h of lifting or quality in ANY build phase — it erases the adaptation you just paid for
CONTRAST SHOWER	30s cold / 90s warm x4, finish warm	Any day, all year — circulation without the adaptation cost	No restrictions
HOT BATH (pre-sleep)	15min warm bath ~90min before bed	Nights before quality when sleep has been poor — drops core temp after, deepens sleep	Right at bedtime (too hot too late delays sleep)

THE RULE: in build phases (P1-P4) the goal is ADAPTATION — heat helps it, cold erases it. In race season (P5-P6) the goal flips to FRESHNESS — cold earns its place between races. Same logic as tart cherry. A Mon/Thu HEAT/COLD line on the daily pages tells you the current phase's dose.
