

GEDYON — DAILY WORKOUTS, ALL 45 WEEKS

Companion to the 45-Week Build. Every day written out. Paces shown assume each tier gate is PASSED at its earliest week — if a gate isn't passed yet, keep using your current tier's paces for every session (the structure stays identical). WHOOP gates every day: yellow = one quality max + HR caps, red = easy/rest and the session moves. Updated Fri Sep 4, 2026 — ramp-in below (Fri-Sun), Week 1 starts Mon Sep 7. SUPPS lines use YOUR cabinet. STRENGTH SYSTEM: core Mon/Thu (A/B circuits, progress by phase) · POWER after Wed hills/speed (plyos at max intent, full rest — this is where lean speed comes from) · DURABILITY 5min after Tue/Fri quality (calves/hips — the anti-breakdown work). All bodyweight: powerful and cut, never bulky. The rule: power reps are always FRESH and explosive; core is done to quality, not to burnout.

HOW TO RUN EVERY PIECE — THE DETAILS THAT MAKE IT WORK

Same workout, different execution = different training. Two habits to break, named directly: (1) the 20-minute one-pace warm-up/cool-down — a long slog at a single moderate pace is junk volume that tires you before the work and blunts recovery after it; warm-ups are short and PROGRESSIVE, cool-downs are short and SLOW. (2) jumping straight into the work — the first rep on cold legs runs on the wrong energy system, spikes HR, and makes every following rep worse. The strides at the end of the warm-up ARE the ignition — they are not optional decoration.

| WARM-UP (quality days)  | PROGRESSIVE: first 5min at recovery shuffle (10:30+), middle at slow-easy (10:00), last 5min at the FAST end of easy (9:30). Never one flat pace.                                    | 12-15min (2mi) — not 20+. More is not better; it is withdrawal from the workout.                               | Finish with the prescribed strides, take 2min of walking/standing AFTER the last stride, THEN start rep 1.              | Raises muscle temp and opens the aerobic system without spending it. The 2min gap lets HR settle so rep 1 starts honest.                 |
| STRIDES                 | Build through each one: jog the first 5s, fast by 10s, at ~mile race effort (NOT sprint) for the last 10s. Tall, quick, relaxed — if your face or shoulders tighten, it is too fast. | 20 seconds each, 6x on easy days, 4x pre-workout.                                                              | 60-90s WALK between — full recovery, never jog-loop straight into the next one.                                         | Recruits fast-twitch fibers and sharpens mechanics with zero fatigue cost — but only if each one is rested and relaxed.                  |
| REST BETWEEN 1000m REPS | STANDING or slow walk. Hands on hips, breathe. Not a jog.                                                                                                                            | 60-75s (build weeks) / 90s (deloads). Time it — cutting rest short turns threshold work into a race.           | Start the next rep when the clock says, not when you feel ready (that is what the rest length is calibrated for).       | Threshold reps only work at threshold. Short rest or hot reps push lactate past the zone and you train the wrong system.                 |
| REST BETWEEN HILL REPS  | Walk down. Fully. No jogging the descent.                                                                                                                                            | The full walk-down (~90s-2min). If you are still breathing hard at the bottom, stand another 30s.              | Every rep at MAX effort requires full recovery — 8 great reps beat 12 tired ones.                                       | Hills train power. Power needs a fresh nervous system every rep — tired hills are just slow intervals with injury risk.                  |
| FARTLEK FLOATS          | The 90s float is a SLOW jog (10:00+), not a steady run. The surge is only a surge if the float is real.                                                                              | 90s between 3min hard bouts.                                                                                   | Hard bouts at tempo effort; the mid-surge gear change is 30s FASTER within the bout, then back to hard — never all-out. | Teaches gear changes for laps 2-3 of the mile. Floats too fast = one long moderate run = nothing trained.                                |
| COOL-DOWN               | SLOW. Recovery shuffle, 10:30+/mi, slower than feels dignified. It is a flush, not a run.                                                                                            | 10min (1-1.5mi) after quality. NOT 20min — after a hard session, extra time on your feet is cost, not fitness. | Optional: 5min walk at the end. Then eat within 30min.                                                                  | Clears metabolites and starts recovery. Running it at easy pace (9:30) quietly adds load to your hardest days — the opposite of its job. |
| EASY RUNS               | 9:30-10:15 (current tier). Talk test: full sentences OUT LOUD. HR 125-140.                                                                                                           | As prescribed — no bonus miles.                                                                                | No structure needed — this is the one place "just go run" is correct.                                                   | The engine is built here, at low cost. Run these too fast and Tuesday/Friday degrade — the classic self-sabotage loop.                   |

WU/CD paces above are for your CURRENT tier (T1). When a tier gate is passed, shift them with it: warm-up always ends at the fast end of that tier's easy band, cool-down is always ~60s/mi slower than easy. The quality-day template never changes: progressive WU -> strides -> 2min settle -> work -> short slow CD.
